As of November 26, 2016, 1,666 people had been enrolled. Construction began in 1971 and the first classes were held in 1973. The school was originally housed as Bartlett High School, named after U.S. Senator Bob Bartlett, and Begich High School, named after U.S. Representative Nick Begich. Bartlett is part of the Anchorage School District and is accredited by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. Its attendance area is northeast of Anchorage and Elmendorf Air Force Base, and about 25% of its students are military dependents. The student body is racially and ethnically diverse. About 43.7% of students are white, 18.9% are black, 6.1% are Hispanic, 13.5% are Asian-Pacific Islander, and 17.8% are American Indian/Alaska Natives. In 2003-2004, the School's Productivity Profile District reported three goals: Improving the school climate (achieved), increasing the proportion of students enrolled in HSG-E Math by 5% (partially achieved) and reducing dropouts (achieved). The drop-out rate in 2003-4 was 7.3%. Bartlett is classified as School 4A by the Alaska School Events Association. The history of Bartlett High School was badly damaged during the 7.0 earthquake that occurred on November 30, 2018. The name of the school, like other school complexes for senior and junior classes in the Anchorage School District in the 1960s and early 1970s, the complex where Bartlett lived, was originally given two names. One was for high school and the other for high school. In keeping with this, Bartlett's comprehensive housing was named Bartlett-Begich, 5 denoting Bartlett High School (named after Senator Bob Bartlett) and Begich High School (named after Rep. Nick Begich). In the late 1970s and early 1980s, the Anchorage School Board began to change all of these complexes into secondary schools and establish separate secondary schools (now known as secondary schools) because new facilities could be built in each case by moving the original name of the secondary school as a new secondary school was built. Thus, the complexes, formerly known as Chugiak-Gruning, became Chugiak High School and Gruning High School, Service-Hanshev became a service high school and Khanshev High School and so on. At the time, the school was now called Benny Benson High School (alternative school paired with Eastern High School, opened in 1991) was designed and and it was not expected that a junior school would be built in northeastern Anchorage. Nick Begich's family were asked if they wanted a new facility named after Begich (not Benny Benson), but the family asked rather that Begich's name remain on the Bartlett High School building until a new junior school is built in the area, with the assumption that Begich's name would be given to the school. Bartlett-Begich remained technically associated with the school building after that, but Begich's name was not used in Bartlett High School diplomas, official documents, or anchorage school reports; it survived only in the words of Bartlett - Begich, painted on the southeast wall of the high school building. In November 2006, the Anchorage School Board officially announced that the name of the new high school in Anchorage would be named after Begich. Begich High School opened for classes on August 22, 2007. Famous alumni In this section is not given any sources. Please help improve this section by adding links to reliable sources.
